

Make Your Lesson Plan Count.

Bring Financial Education Into the Classroom.

Lessons in saving, budgeting and managing money last a lifetime. To help your students learn these skills, look no further than a local bank.

Educators who have participated in ABA Foundation's Teach Children to Save program mark the experience as one that resonates with kids and aligns well with their curriculum.

Educators told us working with a banker volunteer...

... fills an educational need in their classroom

more than half said the lesson fulfilled an education requirement

2 in 3

said they lack experience teaching personal finance

80%

said the lesson fit with their planned curriculum

100%

said the experience met their expectation

... introduces students to new ways of learning

100% said students enjoyed the lesson

#1 reason: interactive lesson format

#2 reason: relevant content

75% said activities and games were the most important lesson material

... is a five-star program

98% said they would like the banker to return for another lesson

#1 reason for participating: bankers are experts who offer real-life knowledge

Teach Children to Save Lessons

AT-A-GLANCE

elementary and middle school programs available

45-minute lesson

interactive, discussion-based format

Make the grade in financial education.

Get started today at aba.com/FinEdLink

