Dallas, Texas – Clients and non-clients are encouraged to register now for the ALM First Hedging & Derivatives Symposium, which will be held virtually November 8 - 9, 2022. ALM First experts will introduce the fundamentals of hedging, show attendees how to develop hedging strategies using derivatives suitable for their institution, and share best practices for implementing hedging & derivatives strategies. This annual event will also include real-time activities that showcase the potential impact of hedging for attendees.

Staff and executives from Finance, Lending and Accounting, ALCO members, and anyone interested in gaining proficiency in hedging with derivatives are encouraged to register. Attendees will expand their knowledge and sharpen practical skills while earning more than ten CPE credit hours through this exclusive virtual event series.

“In the current environment, it’s more important than ever for financial institutions to understand all the tools available to help them manage interest rate risk,” said Emily Hollis, CFA, CEO of ALM First. “Our team of experts is looking forward to leading this year’s deep dive on hedging & derivatives to share their knowledge, skills and best practices with a wider audience.”

Online registration is now open, with early-bird pricing available through October 21, 2022.
